

This may sound strange, but despite the fact that we are now surrounded by the social media and this kind of stuff – it's seven days a week and 24 hours a day and this kind of stuff – I don't think much has changed. Remember, the cable news channels are only watched by a fraction of the American people. I mean, folks who are into this stuff are watching CNN and Fox and MSNBC and this kind of stuff. But the vast majority of Americans are not glued to their television sets looking at those cable news channels. Nor are they spending hours and hours of time looking at campaign news and election news on their computers. I mean they're out trying to make a living, especially these days, given our economy and what happened to us.
