

The caucuses, I mean they've been around for quite some time, but it wasn't until 1976 when Jimmy Carter was running for President, that they started to gain the national prominence that they have because it's a little known Governor from Georgia, came in and worked the state, worked the caucuses very carefully, and he actually won. And, that surprised everybody and it got his name on the national agenda. If he hadn't have won those caucuses in 1976, he would have stayed as a peanut farmer.
